

My Learning Style

---

By Ian N.

Hi I'm I recently took a test to find my learning style my here is information about my top two styles. My top learning styles are verbal and solitary. Verbal learning style involves both written and spoken words. Those that use this style find it easy to express themselves, both in writing and verbally. They love reading and writing, as well as playing on the meaning or sound of words, such as in tongue twisters, rhymes, limericks and similar . A person with this style knows the meaning of many words, and regularly makes an effort to find the meaning of new words. And finally they use these words, as well as phrases they've picked up recently, when talking to others. Those who have a solitary learning style are more private, introspective and independent. They concentrate well, focusing their thoughts and feelings on the current topic. They are aware of their own thinking, and may analyze the different ways they think and feel. They spend time on self-analysis, and often reflect on past events and the ways to approached them. Some of them take time to ponder and assess accomplishments or challenges. Some keep a journal, diary or personal log to record your personal thoughts and events. Most like to spend time alone. Many have a personal hobby. They feel that know themselves. They think independently, and know their minds. They may have attended self-development workshops, read self-help books or used other methods to develop a deeper understanding of themselves. Some prefer to work on problems by retreating to somewhere quiet and working through possible solutions. Sometimes they spend too much time trying to solve a problem that you could more easily solve by talking to someone. Several like to make plans and set goals. Knowing there direction in life and work. They prefer to work for themselves, or have thought a lot about it. If they don't know there current direction in life, they feel a deep sense of dissatisfaction.

Now I bet you're wondering what of this involves me well now I'm going to tell you. The first learning style I found mostly accurate, mainly because it says I like to read, and talk. What didn't sound like me was the writing part. Then on the second style at first I thought it was me until I found the definition. The first two and a half sentences were right, the second half of the third sentence was right. Also the fourth and sixth through eighth but not much more than that.
